

It is critical that special needs groups have access to exemptions from co-contributions, particularly Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and people who experience intersecting disadvantages on the basis of ethnicity, gender and sexual diversity, disability and chronic illness. These groups are struggling already to financially cope in older age, and are more likely to also be paying rent.