To whom it may concern.

The recent 'King Review' recommending homeopathic products not be sold in Australian pharmacies;

- Removes my right as a consumer, voter & taxpayer to make health choices for myself & my family.
- It is not at all consistent with the growing choices of the community & their preference for natural products. 70% (over half of the Australian community for anyone who is unable to calculate!) use complimentary medicine. Removing homeopathic products from pharmacies does not represent the views or desires of the community.
- Australia is apparently a free society. Politicians, drug companies & government bureaucrats should not be deciding what products I use to care for my family. I'm not asking for medical cannabis on tap!
- The King review has completely ignored & blindly denied the existence of safe record & widespread use of homeopathic products in Europe where almost 30% of the population freely access homeopathic products in pharmacies.

As a long standing taxpayer & voter I stand strongly against the recommendation. As the wife of a man who was born in Switzerland (who recognise homeopathy) I would strongly consider taking our tax-paying abilities to Switzerland & their free society.

Yours Sincerely
